FOREWORD

Each year, in high schools all over the country, millions of boys and girls are either beginning or completing a high school career. For those just beginning, there are three years of school to look forward to—some of the happiest days of their lives: sports, dances, student government participation, dates, new acquaintances, lasting friendships, as well as greater intimacy with the world of books, increasing depth in thinking, and broadening viewpoints. For those graduating, there are fond memories in the backward glance and the lure of the unknown in the way that lies ahead: college, jobs, business ventures.

In this book, we introduce, Jack and Jill, typical high-school students. They are you and you and you. In each section of our book, Jack and Jill appear in class, at club, on the varsity, in orchestra and chorus, in fact wherever Reading High School students gather. We hope that their off-the-record performances will help to give to you, our readers, an interesting picture of our school life and of this year of our graduation.

SPEAKING FOR JACK

On the pages before us we find Jack's three-year diary. These intimate glimpses into his life and experiences will afford us real pleasure and reveal his treasured memories. That they be more meaningful, however, we should be better acquainted with Jack—his background, his problems, his visions.

Jack is a cosmopolitan chap, fun-loving yet serious. He is a curious mixture of idealism and practicality; of varied experiences and naivete; of self-assurance and backwardness; of friendliness and belligerency. In school, he has studied some, bluffed some. By and large, he avoided advanced mathematics and science, tolerated English, enjoyed history, shop work, and some cultural work such as art or music. He hasn't been too certain of his plans for the future, preferring to postpone a final decision until his return from the army. His family is typically American—honest, hard-working, patriotic. Jack's brother has served in the armed services; a cousin, in the WACS. He bought stamps and bonds, collected scrap, took some pre-induction work. A few weeks ago he registered under selective service and is now awaiting his call. He'll serve his stint and then come back to pursue his civilian activity.

He has liked most of his teachers, admired and respected a few. He has rebelled at some restrictions both at school and at home but has recognized the necessity for them. He likes Jill, has "dated" her occasionally, but has definitely not thought about marriage. His principal problems have been his allowance and his clothes; his deepest need, sympathetic understanding; his greatest accomplishment, graduation. His future is shrouded in mystery but he faces it confidently.

Tomorrow, Jack will be your milk-man or your lawyer; your banker or your mayor; your grocer, your butcher, your cab driver, or your doctor; your bandit or your minister. The die is cast, the decision made; but the fact that this is his diary, that he is now a high school graduate, should be assurance that his will be a constructive citizenship.

LOBBYISTS

From early morn till daylight fails,
We gather, we chatter, we laugh:
Forever in our memories
We'll tread this well-worn path.

SPEAKING FOR JILL

During the most important period in the world's history Jill walked the corridors of this castle on the hill. To the casual observer this girl with her shining hair, her uniform of loose sweater and full skirt, her scuffed shoes and immaculate socks seemed care-free, rather indifferent, and a little too bold. But these were hard and confusing years for Jill! Jack knew his place in the war: in school and out attention was focused upon preparing him for his task. Sometimes he was taken from school and sent to far places where Jill, unlike the Jill of the nursery rhyme, could not go tumbling after. Jill was secretly a little glad that she need not face the horror of war, but often she felt left out, unneeded and unwanted. The routine of school palled and seemed of no value when compared with the exciting things Jack was doing. Jill plunged eagerly into all forms of war services: industry lured her and she took a part time job not only because of the wages offered but because it made her a participant in the war effort. She persisted in her effort at school and this June of 1946 she faces the uncertain and problematical future with courage, high ideals, and good judgment. Reading High is proud of her Jills. May they have the wisdom, the vision and the strength needed to help build a better, kinder world.

SPEAKING FOR THE G. I.

During the war, the impending induction of the young men, particularly those of the twelfth grade, had tremendous educational implications for the secondary school. Everyone knew the enemy was cunning, strong, and well trained. What about the boys we were teaching? Did we put them in the best physical condition? Did we teach them the mathematics, English, health, science, and history that was needed to meet and defeat the enemy? The school met this challenge. The young men on the whole were well enough educated to make victory possible, yet this experience has shown us that we can make the school training more effective as a means of national defense.

Many of the veterans have returned and more are coming back every day. The Servicemen's Readjustment Act provides Federal financial aid to servicemen for from one to four years of education. The secondary school, therefore, is faced with a new problem. The importance of this obligation cannot be over emphasized. This challenge has been accepted by Reading High School. At this writing more than one hundred fifty veterans have enrolled in Reading High and eighteen will receive their diplomas as members of the class of 1946. Sincere congratulations are extended to the veterans. May they rise to the same heights in their work for peace as they did in gaining the glorious victory.

FOOTBALL SEASON

Although they did not have a very successful record in the win and lose column, this year's Red Knights showed that old Reading High fighting spirit.

Opening the season with a 12-0 win over a visiting Ashley High team, Ron Kichline's proteges looked impressive. However, on the following Saturday, Ben Franklin High of Philadelphia evened the Rockets' record in pre-conference tilts by pinning a 14-7 defeat on the battling Knights.

The rambling Rockets then outfought and outplayed a visiting William Penn combine in a thrilling game from which they emerged a 6-0 victor, and thereby racked up their only conference win in two years.

The Knights were then turned back by the strong elevens of that powerful Lehigh Valley trio, Allentown, Bethlehem, and Easton, to the tunes of 41-0, 27-0, and 26-6 respectively.

The Knights traveled to York in quest of their third win of the season and only after being outfought by a gallant Reading eleven did the White Roses come out on the long end of a 12-6 count. The most disheartening game of the season came when the Red Tornadoes from Lancaster overran the Red Rockets, 58-7.

A smooth-working Lebanon eleven played host to the Knights and administered a 19-6 lacing to the Rockets. A number of times the Red Knights were within the Lebanon one-yard line but just didn't have the necessary final punch to hit paydirt.

The Knights ended the '45 season by traveling to Pottsville in the annual Turkey Day game with that team, and suffered a 25-6 setback from a vastly improved combine in the host city.

The Knights ended the season with 2 decisions on the right side of the ledger compared to 8 losses. However, the Knights did score on every team they met except Allentown and Bethlehem, a step in advance of last year's record.

WATER BOY

OUR FLAG DRILLER

"MINNIE MINNIE WAKA"

Everyone wore smiles when Jimmy Bright, stellar left halfback of the 1945 gridiron aggregation, was awarded the Schad trophy by Lester Stallman, manager of the local Astor Theatre. Fred Cardin, master of ceremonies for the occasion, looked on with as big a smile as Jim's. Playing two years of varsity football for Reading High, Bright truly deserved the award for his outstanding playing. . Win, lose, or draw, for a dependable football performer—look for Jimmy Bright.

Highlighting the Fall Sports Party was the presentation of the Eugene (Babe) Borek Memorial Trophy to Dave Jenkins, outstanding member of our 1945 J. V. Football team. This award was the first of its kind ever made and will be presented each year by Bill Beyerle, Reading High booster. This trophy is a tribute paid to "Babe" Borek, former Reading High athlete, who was the unfortunate victim of a fatal automobile accident last year.

At State College, the Boylesmen dropped behind to a seventh place out of seven entries for the state finals; however, valuable experience for the spring Track Team was amassed.

BASKETBALL

This year's "hot and cold" Red Knights, under the able mentorship of newcomer Charley Dunkelberger, finished the season with a 12-10 win and lose record. After dropping the first four games of the season, the Red Knights came to life and defeated a strong combine from Southern High of Philadelphia. They then proceeded to win five straight Conference games before they were stopped by a powerful Lancaster five. When the smoke cleared, the Rockets found themselves in third place in the Central Penn League, with a record of eight wins as against four losses.

The Knights captured another "third" in the Conference when Dick Gernert scored 133 points to finish behind Bernie Adams of Lancaster and Bob Nicholson of William Penn. Gernert's efforts resulted in his receiving the John Spangler Smith Memorial Trophy which is awarded annually to the outstanding player on the Varsity.

Second row—Jackie Boyer, Ruth Christian, Phyllis Fisher, Fanny Lykens.

Third row—Joyce Bredbenner, Evelyn Leibold, Marian Printz.

All year round it's a popular game,
Although some think it's much too tame.
Back and forth we hit the ball,
As we play on the table in the upstairs hall.

BADMINTON

I've tried every sport in spring, winter and fall,
But this one is different, you don't need a ball.
That gadget, a birdie, is the missile we use,
We all think it's grand 'cause we hardly ever lose.

TENNIS

Seventh row—Ruth Andes, Bertie Pitcherello, Jeannine Ramsey, Marian Printz, Fanny Lykens, Louise Moyer.

Two rackets and a ball are required,
And girls who won't be easily tired.
They jump and they run and they whack with all their might
Two girls playing tennis is a very cute sight.

SOFTBALL

Sponsors—Miss Kaufmann, Miss Ely.

Front row (left to right)—Floy Faust, Ruth Fister, Dolores Balon, Shirley McCall, June Miller, Anna Mae Helms, Shirley Becker.

"Hit it," they yell as the ball comes my way,
But - I miss it as usual; I just can't play!
We jump up and down and are kept on the run,
But everyone agrees that it's plenty of fun.
